4. Describe the movie I would produce:

Taking my cue from Dick Carson, I would produce an animated late night show called The Wheel of Best Movies. A single voice actor would “host” the show as an animated version of Merv Griffin who spins a giant wheel (animated because Avatar, the most profitable movie, was). The wheel can land on ten different outcomes, each of which is the title of one of the top ten most profitable movies. Whichever title the wheel lands on, the show then cuts to screening that movie (no royalties paid, of course). The budget is divvied up between the voice actor, animation, and purchasing DVD copies of each of the top ten movies. The voice actor is of course me, the director, so the total cast size is one (below average, but the mode of cast sizes).
